With the rise of exotic restaurants in the A, it's easy to forget that former soccer star-turned-restaurateur Justin Anthony opened not only the city's first, but America's first South African restaurant way back in 1998. The Buckhead hot spot got a makeover in 2014—thanks to Anthony's designer-to-the-stars wife Kelly Wolf-Anthony—upgrading the cozy dining room with modern finishes that hold court with the stellar menu. The highlights: sweet ground beef curry with chutney, giant grilled butterflied prawns bathed in lemon butter, tender red-wine-laced ostrich medallions and one of the city's most extensive South African wine lists.
